Description:

Burrowes delivers red-hot chemistry with a masterful mix of playfulness and sensuality. —Publishers WeeklyHonor or happiness—he cant have both. Tiberius Flynn may be every inch an English lord, but smart, headstrong beauty Hester Daniels has no use for his high-handed ways--no matter how handsome, charming, or beguiling he is. They only see eye to eye in caring about the feisty little girl who is under their protection. Tiberius's haughty insistence that his wealthy estate in England is a better place for the child than her beloved, rundown Scotland home sparks Hester's fierce protectiveness, and the battle lines are drawn. Praise for The Bridegroom Wore Plaid, a Publishers Weekly Best Book of the Year: The MacGregor Series The Bridegroom Wore Plaid (Book 1) Mary Fran and Matthew (Novella) Once Upon a Tartan (Book 2) The MacGregors Lady (Book 3) What a Lady Needs for Christmas (Book 4) As always, Burrowes creates a character-driven novel... The slowly simmering sensuality and the strong bonds of family hold readers' interest and hearts. —RT Book Reviews, 4 stars Will engage readers with emotion and sensuality... Burrowes has a talent for filling traditional romance situations with depth and the unexpected. —Booklist Turns out that I am definitively not a Grace Burrowes fan. I've tried, but ended up either DNF'ing or returning 3 out of the half dozen books I've (tried to) read. I find her writing excessively, cloyingly coy and this one is no exception. I also find it often difficult to decipher the relationships between the different characters because many of them have been featured in earlier books and the author doesn't do a good job explaining them early on. It has a barebones plot, exclusively revolving around the maternal and paternal families' fight over the custody of an 8-year-old girl. The girl is the step-niece of the heroine and niece of the hero. The motivation behind the child's custody battle apparently is a means for grandpa to get grandma's attention (is this believable???) I would not actually qualify this story as a romance because the disposition of the child is the main course, everything else is a side dish. On the other hand, you may like this book if you are partial to 1) 50% of the dialog is conversation between child and other characters 2) 40% of the dialog is conversation by other characters concerning said child 3) marked attention paid to food consumed as exemplified by the number of occurrences throughout the text of scones (42), butter (23), cakes (13), raisin (18), toast (15), eggs (14). 4) A heroine who initiates all sexual encounters of hero. I always have problems with GB's heroines and the heroine of "Once upon a tartan" is no exception. Hester (a god-awful name) is rusticated in the Highlands because of a scandal and spends her days moping about. She is taking care of her brother's wife's daughter from her first marriage while they are off honeymooning. She professes to love the child so much that she will die for her, after knowing the child for a few weeks – is this believable? or is it just a manifestation of how uninteresting Hester really is. Also hard to take is her sexual aggression towards the hero, which is a bit demeaning. I find it very hard to connect or empathize with the heroine. The hero is somewhat more endearing but again, there isn't much substance to the character.
